Eisenhower Gets Flu Inoculation

Believed Exposed To Disease

President Eisenhower, who may have been exposed to Asian flu, got inoculated against the disease during his lunchtime break Monday.

The shot was administered by his personal physician, Maj. Gen. Howard McC. Snyder, upon the recommendation of Surgeon General Leroy E. Burney.

James C. Hagerty, the President's press secretary, said Eisenhower came in contact with two persons last week who subsequently developed mild cases of what has been diagnosed tentatively as Asian flu.

The first person, Hagerty said, was Thomas Craven Jr., a newsreel photographer who was in the President's office early last week day. Eisenhower saw Dr. Gabriel Hauge, an economic adviser, Wednesday and Hague was strickon the next day,

At first the President was in elined to wait for his shot until applies of the new vaccine had ome more abundant. He told news conference Wednesday would have an inoculation "just as soon as ordinary people like I am can get it."

Centers On Doing Duty As Guard

MAEBASHI, Japan (Tues day) (AP) — The William S. Girard manslaughter trial has quickly boiled down again to a jurisdictional question.

The lingering question, raised long before the U.S. Supreme Court ordered the 22-year-old GI turned over to Japanese justice was whether Girard was carrying out his Army guard duties when he fatally shot a Japanese wo-man shell salvager on a U.S. firing range last Jan. 30. The defense insists he was; the prosecution that he was not.

the trial was recessed 12 days fer of Girard's case to a U.S. Army court-martial, was deferred. Girard told the court it has no right to try him for shooting the woman, Mrs. Naka Sakai, 46.

Cash For College

Temporarily, at least, the pressing problems of financing the great growth of America's elementary and secondary schools have been left to the states and cities. The widely held view that they can manage the matter will now be tested.

Hard on the heels of this difficulty, however, comes the question of how to keep pace with the vastly expanding college population in Amer-

In its recent report, the President's committee on higher education forecast a doubling of college enrollments by 1970 to some six million students. The obvious question: Where will they find a place?

Present colleges and universities could not possibly accommodate them. And the nation has only 13 years to make ready for this engulfing tide. When one realizes how long America's existing college "plant" has been building, he can gain some idea of the problem's size.

Unless hundreds of thousands of young Americans are to be deprived of the college training they need and want more and more, the country must plan now for their storming of the college gates.

Mr. Eisenhower's committee has some useful suggestions:

Faculty salaries need to be hiked up to 80 per cent to attract teachers in sufficient number and quality to bear the rising load.

Students - or their parents should get marked help in meeting the expenses of schooling. This could include tax deductions for school outlays, and more credit facilities for stu-

Congress ought to encourage bigger financial contributions from private sources by making the tax laws on the subject more favorable. And it could well continue college housing loans and other existing educational

Except for these last proposals, though, the group does not grapple hard with the fundamental matter; Who is to provide the money for so huge an expansion of the country's college establishment?

Clearly, digging up such sums can't be left to chance, or the high level training of countless young Americans may be a dream unfulfilled. If to get a sensible financing plan means another tour of duty for the President's committee, then most citizens would say: "Let's have it."

Soviet Policy - Whose?

In the view of high U. S. officials, genuine mystery has begun t surround the question of who is making vital Soviet policy.

The belief is widespread that the designer is not Nikita Khrushchev, Communist party boss. He has been guilty of many errors and may well be in danger of losing his job.

Much is done in the name of Marshal Zhukov, who helped Khrushchev beat down his rivals recently. Yet those close to big events say the marshal displays little real knowledge of some matters advanced by his efforts.
